achieved inside the soul," an ability "to accept the pummelings of fate and fortune with equanimity."

Religion and psychiatry alike both sought this goal, he believed, and he dedicated himself to proving the fallacy of what had become an apparent conflict.

In his personal search for peace of mind, Dr. Liebman probed deeply, sensitively and courageously into that morass of psychological and religious confusions which beset all men living in the present age. Finding a measure of peace for himself, he wrote about it with such simple wisdom that his book, "Peace of Mind", still leads the non-fiction best-seller list more than two years after publication.

The unpretentious groping of this hitherto almost unknown student of the human soul somehow touched unerringly on the aching spiritual nerve centers of peoples of all races and conditions, bringing them some of the peace he had found, and bringing him the new distractions always entailed in successful authorship, comments the New York Herald Tribune.

His modest 203-page volume, published by Simon & Schuster in April, 1946, has sold more than 700,000 copies in seventeen printings, and has been published in eleven foreign editions, including Japanese - Korean, Finnish and Czech.

Ten years before he wrote the book, the young rabbi had undergone a complete psychoanalysis and had derived from the experience an understanding both of the principles of Freud and of those human problems which were no less his than every man's.

A brilliant student of religion, he took his guiding principles of psychology and applied them to the acknowledged "goods" of life, deciding that if a man could possess them all, "he would be as a god." But a spiritual mentor of his younger days, upon looking over the list, scratched them all out and wrote down just one—"peace of mind." Thus his own search began.

"Mine has been a rabbinate of trouble," he said of his book, "of depression, of Hitler's rise, world crisis, global war, the attempted extermination of my people. My text had to be, 'Comfort ye, comfort ye my people'."

However ill the age, he contended, man always can win peace

ILGWU To Lend Israel $1,000,000

The general executive board of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL, voted unanimously to authorize a loan of $1,000,000 from the union treasury to the new state of Israel.

The board's action was taken on recommendation of David Dubinsky, the union's president, at a meeting at Unity House, the ILGWU vacation resort at Forest Park, Pa. The loan had been requested by Mrs. Golda Myerson, administrator of the Jewish section of Jerusalem and member of the Provisional Council of Israel, who is in the U.S. to enlist aid for the new government.

"We have faith and confidence in the stability of Israel, and it is the desire of our members to assist wholeheartedly in this critical period of the young state's existence," Mr. Dubinsky declared in announcing the executive board's action. He said the union's bankers in New York had been instructed to make the money available to Mrs. Myerson at once.

In addition to the loan, the union has donated over [illegible] making dresses, suits and skirts and other items of feminine apparel.

The union itself has given $150,000 to the United Jewish Appeal and an equal amount to the Jewish Labor Committee. It has also sent $250,000 to Italy to finance economic rehabilitation and to check the spread of Communist influence in that country, Mr. Dubinsky reported.

Crum Calls Truce 'Fraud And Farce'

Bartley C. Crum, chairman of the National Council of Americans for Haganah and publisher of the newspaper PM, declared in New York that the four-week truce in Palestine "is a fraud and a farce." Speaking before 1,200 women attending the annual luncheon of the New York Council of Pioneer Women, the Women's Labor Zionist Organization of America, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, he criticized the contradictory course that the U.S. government is pursuing in relation to the Jewish State, and said that "our State Department fails to recognize the orders of the President of the United States."

"We have granted de facto recognition to Israel, but it should be de jure recognition as well," he declared. "Our government should immediately exchange diplomatic representatives with the new republic."

He demanded to know why the Department of Justice seized four airplane engines in the city of Los Angeles that were destined for Israel, why an American Zionist organization was threatened with action if it did not register as an agent of a foreign government, why a Constellation plane, bound for Palestine, was ordered back, and why the FBI was inquiring into the activities of Irishmen in Boston who want to fight for Israel.

"Granting all the good intentions of President Truman, there are forces at work in our government and in other governments which do not look with favor upon the reestablishment of the Jewish State. We must constantly be on guard, particularly during the next four weeks. The President is away from Washington, but I hope he is keeping in touch with the State Department. Americans for Haganah has had 10,000 non-Jewish volunteers who want to go to Israel," he revealed. "Let this not be discouraged by our government. I pray that Americans will always

NON-JEW LEAVES BEQUEST TO U. J. A.

Mrs. Hattie R. Anderson Eckhardt of Boulder, Col., who died last October, has left $5,000 to the United Jewish Appeal, Henry Morgenthau Jr., general chairman, announced in New York.

Mrs. Eckhardt, who was non-Jewish, for many years was a regular contributor to the annual campaigns of the Appeal. She wrote that she was leaving the money because of her "admiration for the Jewish people and realization that their religion and culture have improved man's lot."

She was the widow of Dr. Carl C. Eckhardt, Professor of History at the University of Colorado in Boulder. In making the bequest Mrs. Eckhardt asked that it be used in any way the administrative officer of the Appeal decided.

"These representatives of a people which have through the ages cared for its own," she said, "can surely find some adequate way to use this small sum for the good of suffering Jews and to the honor and glory of the God of both Jew and Gentile."

Urges U.S. Jews To Give Israel Aid Only

Dr. Simon Segal, director of the home office of the American Jewish Committee's department of foreign affairs, asserted in New York that American Jews "must and will help support Israel economically, through private capital [illegible] and aid [illegible] the extent [illegible] real must perform, such as the maintenance of the public services and offices of government. We should not try to assume that we can or should here decide political issues within Palestine."

Irving M. Engel, chairman of the national administrative committee of the American Jewish Committee, announced that ever since the Committee had endorsed the Balfour Declaration after World War I, its principal objective with respect to Palestine "has been to secure Jewish immigration, freedom of land ownership in that country and protection of the civil rights of all its inhabitants."

"Once freed from the threat of aggression," he continued, "the newly created State of Israel is certain to confer lasting benefits of peace, liberty, equality, justice and economic security upon all its inhabitants—Jew and Arab alike. By doing so, it will exert a positive influence in behalf of the democratic way of life, not only in the Near East, but throughout the world."

Ku Klux Klan Tries Comeback

The Ku Klux Klan has just completed secret arrangements for "the biggest demonstration in Klan history", to take place on Stone Mountain, Georgia, July 23, it has been revealed by undercover observers of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League.

Anti-Semitic implications of the meeting were explicit in the announced nation-wide distribution of 500,0000 gummed stickers of a Klansman on horseback with the legend "Yesterday, Today, and Forever." Recently dozens of Jewish shops in downtown Atlanta were plastered with these stickers. In sending out the stickers, Klan officials recommended that they be used to intimidate Jews, Catholics, and the foreign-born, but cautioned Kluxers against putting them on or in mailboxes, for fear of prosecution by postal authorities.

In previous meetings of the central Klan Klavern No. 1, in Atlanta, it has been proposed that the Ku Klux Klan set up a committee to "track down the original names of Jews who have changed names," and also to picket some prominent Atlanta Jew in a bid for publicity. Norman Elsas, proprietor of the Fulton Bag and Paper Mill, was mentioned as a "likely prospect."

Death Of Israel Army Secret Chief Is First Of Any High U.S. Former Officer

David Marcus, forty-seven, former Commissioner of Correction of New York City, was killed in action while serving as supreme commander of Jewish forces in Jerusalem, only a few hours before the Arab-Jewish truce became effective. Recently appointed to his high command in Haganah, the Jewish Army, although he had been a military adviser to Haganah since January, his connection with the State of Israel had been kept secret.

Colonel Marcus, who was a holder of the Distinguished Service Cross for his part in the surrenders of Italy and Germany and of the Bronze Star Medal for gallantry in action, was killed while leading Haganah forces on the Jerusalem front a few hours before the Arab-Israeli cease-fire became effective.

Brooklyn-born, Colonel Marcus was decorated in 1946 by the British Embassy with the Order of the British Empire "in recognition of the distinguished service performed . . . in cooperation with British armed forces during the war."

In 1945, he was with the tank column that entered the Dachau concentration camp, and the horror he saw there, friends said, confirmed his belief in the need for a Jewish homeland. He served on the German occupation staff of General Lucius D. Clay, and resigned from the Army in March, 1947.

Colonel Marcus had seen action in several theatres of war during World War II, had parachuted into Normandy on D-Day, was present at the landing in Sicily and had trained Rangers in raiding [illegible]

Mr. Marcus was a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point and during World War II was a colonel in the Judge Advocate General's Department with important staff and combat missions. He had a part in drafting German Italian and Japanese surrender terms, and was a legal aid with the United States delegations at the Dumbarton Oaks, Yalta, Teheran and Potsdam conferences.

David Ben-Gurion, Israeli Prime Minister, in a telegram to the state's delegation in New York, declared that in his few months in Palestine Mr. Marcus had made an "outstanding contribution to the building up and perfecting of our war machine. His name will live forever in the annals of the Jewish people, and we feel confident that American Jewry will be proud of its great and gallant son who has given his life for the liberation of Israel."

The death of Colonel Marcus was made known in a cablegram sent by Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion to the New York offices of Israel at 16 East Sixty-sixth Street. It was the first death officially recorded by the Israeli Government of a former high-ranking United States Army officer although several former United States soldiers have been killed in the Holy Land while serving with Zionist troops. Cabled reports have indicated that other former ranking United States officers have been in service with the Israeli Army.

would employ thousands of anti-Communist displaced persons in projects in Africa and the Near East was urged upon American business by Common Cause, an anti-totalitarian organization with headquarters at 48 East Forty-eighth Street, New York. The plan envisages a corporation of the scope of the East India Company or the Hudson's Bay Company.

American investment in such a plan could be guaranteed by the government under the economic co-operation act, according to a statement issued by Mrs. Natalie Waite Pulos, Common Cause president, on behalf of the board of directors. The statement pointed out that it would serve not only to be of value "in the broad strategic plan for the organization and defense of the free world."

The statement said that even without the Jews, who desire to go to Palestine, and the "politically unreliable" there are still 700,000 displaced persons of various skills and nationalities who hate Communism and who should be removed from the shadow of the Soviet Union. Common Cause estimates that 250,000 of these are man with combat experience. In the event of war with Russia they would be strategically placed, in Africa and the Near East, to be formed into national military units.

In peace times they would be invaluable in the economic development of areas where there is great need of construction, irrigation, mining and power projects.

CRUM

want to fight for freedom everywhere."

Answering those who have said that the Jews wanted to establish a chauvinistic state in Palestine, Mr. Crum pointed out that not a single Palestinian Arab has been displaced by reason of the return of the Jewish people to their homeland, and that whereas there were 650,000 Palestinian Arabs at the time of the Balfour Declaration, there are today over a million.

"The Jews in Palestine have done all the things that a democratic people should do," he said. "The recent decrees of the Israeli government have given complete economic and political equality to all peoples, whether Jew, Arab or British. They have invited the Arab and British civil servants to remain."

Instead of the four-week truce, which he termed "a fraud and a farce," Mr. Crum suggested that direct negotiations between Abdullah of Trans-Jordan and the Israeli government should have been conducted, with the U.S. government throwing its full support to the Jews.

Many DP Signed Up For U.S.

Five thousand homeless Jews solemnly celebrated the birth of the new State of Israel at the principal displaced persons camp at Berlin, Germany. In brilliant sunlight that beat down on the dusty compound of Dueppal Center, they sang "Hatikvah," the national anthem, paraded with banners and heard patriotic speeches.

The festivities actually began with a ceremony for children, but the main event was delayed until after the Sabbath had ended.

Delegations of seven Zionist political parties paraded past the speakers' stand with banners, followed by school children of all age groups with their teachers. As they paraded, a local German band, conducted by a nephew of the late Dr. Abraham A. Brill, the psychiatrist, played march tunes. The same band played for the singing of "Hatikvah."

Heavy applause greeted every reference to the new state by speakers, and it was particularly heavy when Harold J. Fishbein, director of the International Relief Organization, mentioned the immediate recognition by the United States of the new Government.

A smaller camp in the Marienderf section had preliminary festivities at which a slight flare of antagonism against those who had registered for emigration to the United States quickly dissolved in a humorous interchange. Shouts from the audience demanded that such registrants leave the speakers' platform, but Mr. Fishbein rose to explain.

The clamor ceased, and later camp leaders announced that as it was customary for a new Government to proclaim amnesty, they had decided on one for those who had registered to go to the United States.

Actually, it was explained that while large numbers had registered for the United States at the time of the breakdown in the partition plan, according to the New York Times, this in no way cancelled previous registration for Palestine but simply represented the urgent desire to find some way out of camp life in Germany. It was said that some had been registered for several countries but the majority, if they were to receive a reasonable chance, would prefer Palestine.

Earlier in the week its displaced persons in the camp had erected a simple monument to the Jews who had died fighting the German Army in the Warsaw ghetto.

Everything that favors and promotes general health helps to keep the eyes in a healthy condition and enables them to function at their maximum, national health experts say. While the eyes are a part of the nervous system, they are affected also by other systems, especially the circulatory, digestive and glandular. They are so sensitive to changes in these that ocular disturbances often provide early clues to systemic conditions. Eye infections may affect the general health and difficulties originating in the eyes may spread to neighboring tissues.

CALVERT 1622 Famous Families LE MOYNE 1656

The fame and honour which the eleven sons of Charles Le Moyne, Sieur de Longueuil, bestowed on their distinguished father is unique in Canadian history. Soldiers, explorers and colonizers, they each contributed generously to Canada's greatness. The most famous were Charles, Baron de Longueuil; Jean Baptiste, Sieur de Bienville; and Pierre, Sieur d'Iberville. Between 1670 and 1680, Longueuil built a house, which still stands at Lachine, Quebec—a memorial to a distinguished Canadian family.

Great Families Create Great Nations

EARLY in the 17th Century, Calvert, head of the famous Calvert Family, distinguished English statesman and Secretary of State to King James I, founded pioneer colonies in Newfoundland and Maryland.

In the New World Calvert's descendants drafted a constitution which was the pattern for the democratic freedom we now enjoy. The Calvert ideals of freedom and religious tolerance were perpetuated down through the succeeding generations of the Calvert Family.

The family is the corner-stone upon which great nations are built. Let each of us strive to promote within the great Canadian family the same concepts of freedom and tolerance pioneered by the Calvert Family, three hundred years ago.

Mama's Cooking: Minority Report

A Heretical View Of A Sacred Jewish Institution

By Harry Gersh, Of The Publicity Department Of The Textile Workers Union Of The CIO

By Arrangement With Commentary

My mother was a bad cook. I realize this is a treasonable statement — treasonable to her memory and to one of our most hallowed traditions. But, unhappily, it is true.

In my defense let me say that it took me years to discover it, further years to admit it even to myself. "Like mother used to make" are words of great power; and time is a better sweetener than sugar. As the years pass, the remembered meats become juicier, the doughs fluffier, the grease is cut away. But there are certain facts that are tougher than memory, more stubborn than sentiment. Mother was a bad cook.

When the thought first struck me, I was shocked. Ma's cooking is enshrined in Jewish tradition, as well as in American folklore. Thousands of pretty pictures in magazine ads, subways, and billboards had taught me that motherhood was a higher cooking diploma than a ruban bleu. Brillat-Savarin was good, but he wasn't a mother. Even restaurants, competing with mother, eased the treason by boasting of "home cooking."

At first I thought that it was only my mother who was at fault. She had some personal failing or was poor at learning or didn't have the knack. After reaching the age of eating at friends' homes, I discovered that their mothers weren't so good either. As the "old country" backgrounds of the various mothers swung south from Latvia to Bessarabia, the spicing would change, but the food didn't. Now and then I came across an emancipated mother who had graduated from [illegible]

As my years increased, I grew bolder. I searched for causes. I could not dismiss the ads. They were gospel. So it must be the fault of the individual cook. I was not yet bold enough to question the entire school of Jewish cookery. By watching carefully I discovered that there were two classes of meals. First there were the yoshmake meals. These were for holidays, Friday evenings, Sunday afternoons, and for guests. They included four different kinds of what the Italians call pasta, grain products; two meats; one or two rubbery glands or organs. The second class was the daily meals, composed of "healthy dishes" — boiled meat, boiled vegetables, boiled soup. The first meal was indigestible, heavy, greasy. The second was tasteless. There was a third class, too, the hurry-up meals and the meals for the times when the digestive system revolted. Then we got milchedike, cheeses, and sour cream dishes.

The standard or basic Jewish home meal, which we ate day in, day out, barring shabbos and yomtov, started with a forshpies. Some leftover gefilte fish did nicely, or if that meichel was all gone by Saturday, some chopped eggplant, marinated fish, or chopped liver. Then came the meat. For some reason the meat course was always based on a "good piece mittel-chuck." This cut is almost unknown to American butchers. Maybe it grew only on those animals fated for kosher killing. It was coarse-grained and, however lengthily boiled, it took a lot of chewing.

Then came the soup. Yes, in hundreds of thousands of Jewish homes in America during the first two decades of this century soup came after the meat. How else could you wash down the meal? Then dessert, boiled too — but of that more later. And then a second washing down, this time with tea. Boiling hot, and in a glass, of course.

To the occasional mild complaint about heaviness or lack of taste, my mother would say, "What can be bad with it, fresh meat, fresh vegetables, clean water! What can be bad?"

I didn't know.

I worked out sound economic and social reasons to explain the inclusion of some meats in the menu. In the old countries most Jews were poor, dietary laws restricted choice, etc., etc. And in this country there was the fact that "the store" had first claim on the time of most ma's, and this, perhaps, made boiled dishes — which didn't require watching — inevitable. But that didn't explain why our mothers made a virtue of rubbery splegus, lungs, intestines. Chewing gum was [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] when the [illegible] coatings of the cooking or baking became too obvious, my mother had a standard answer. Everyone's mother had the same alibi. "It's the stove," they would say. The genius of American industry to the contrary, there has never been a good, dependable gas range in the American home. I've heard the same complaint from a hundred practitioners of Jewish "home cooking." What was wrong with the stove, I never found out. The gas burned brightly, the valves regulated the heat, the oven had no leaks. But the stove was no good.

Cans were also objects of dark suspicion. They were poisonous. And if they weren't poisonous, they gave food a bad taste. Not all cans. Canned salmon and tomato herring were allowed. Economic determination, probably. Canned vegetables or soups? Terrible. Mother belonged to the modern school. She used canned tomato soup. Only Campbell's, of course. And only for the making of a special tomato and cabbage borscht. When this doubtful ingredient was used, extra precautions were taken. It was common knowledge that as soon as a can was opened a powerful poison was released that would seep into the can's contents from the sides. Therefore, whatever was in a can had to be taken out with the greatest dispatch. This held for the allowable cans, too, the salmon and tomato herring. When it was time to open a can, the table cloth was pushed back from a corner of the table. A plate or pot was placed close to the can. Then the can-opener was jammed into the cover and the can hurriedly jimmied open. As soon as the opening was large enough to see the contents, they were scraped out. Then mother would take the empty can to the window and peer into it doubtfully. To this day when given canned beer, I sip with suspicion. The insides of the can are sometimes black.

These home-cooked Jewish meals gave rise to a standard Jewish home pharmacopeia. Included were seltzer, bicarbonate of soda, Seidlitz powders, and citrate of magnesia. Public belching was, of course, forbidden. Except for rich uncles and grandfathers. But the tradition of the efficacy of the belch as a digestive aid was maintained. Hence the patented [illegible] pipes. After a heavy meal, the adults would wander, one by one, to the bathroom. This treatment wasn't spoken about. People knew and took care of themselves. They would swallow the foaming drink and come out eased. When I was sixteen and highly conscious of the process, I used to hold my breath during the time between the ending of the spoon's tinkle and the belch.

The homegrown refuyahs were not taken haphazardly. Seltzer was for casual use between meals and for mealtime drinking, as a digestive aid, a warding off of trouble. Bicarbonate was [illegible]

FORMER CANADIAN IS ISRAEL U.N. PUBLICITY MAN

Isaiah L. Kenen, former executive secretary of the American Jewish Conference, has been appointed director of information of the provisional government of Israel's mission at the United Nations. Mr. Kenen, who is the only brother of Mrs. A. Raginsky, Sr., Sherbrooke Street West, Montreal, honorary president of Canadian Hadassah, served in a similar capacity during the presentation of the Jewish case before the U. N. by the Jewish Agency for Palestine.

A forty-three-year-old native of St. Stephen, New Brunswick, Mr. Kenen is the son of Mrs. E. I. Kenen, 50 Bernard Avenue, Toronto. He was graduated from the University of Toronto and from the Cleveland Law School. He was a newspaper man for eighteen years, working on the staff of "The Toronto Daily Star" and "The Cleveland News".

Mr. Kenen was president of the Cleveland Zionist District from 1941 until 1948 when he became director of information for the American Zionist Emergency Council. In that year he was a co-winner of the American Newspaper Guild's Heywood Broun Memorial Award for a series of advertisements in the labor press designed to discourage absenteeism in war production.

GERMANS WANT IN ISRAELI ARMY

An undisclosed number of Germans have volunteered to fight in the Jewish Army against the Arabs in the new State of Israel. Dr. Philip Auerbach, Bavarian Commissioner for political and [illegible] the Central Committee for Liberated Jews all such applications.

Officials of the Jewish Agency for Palestine reported that they had rejected all such offers to date and would continue to reject them. In virtually all instances the volunteers identified themselves as former members of the German Luftwaffe.

MAMA'S COOKING

— real, imaginary, or ... didn't get it." Seidlits powders were the digestive cure-all. They were efficacious in the treatment of any pain or discomfort between the chin and the groin. Citrate of magnesia was reserved for anything that could be classified as really sick. After citrate came the doctor.

Because of this constant awareness of the anticipated consequences of poor, under, over, or just plain eating, the desserts were designed for therapeutic effect. The recipes were traditional. My grandmother used them exactly as they had been handed down to her from her grandmother. Desserts had to be stewed fruit, preferable stewed dried fruit. Stewed prunes were the favorite week-day last course. The basic formula for this dish was universal, regardless of background. Litvak stewed prunes tasted the same as Rumanian stewed prunes. They were stewed prunes, no further description necessary. For special occasions — Friday evenings, holidays, guests — the recipe was broadened to include dried pears and apricots. For the well-to-do there were days when the dessert was stewed dried pears and apricots without the prunes. But this was plain ostentation.

Eventually, after much searching of soul and reckoning of cost, I faced it. In the interest of truth, I would have to accuse the two most sacred concepts in our creed —Jewish mothers and Jewish superiority. I had found out that my mother was not the only Jewish mother who couldn't cook. Joe's mother wasn't any better and Irving's was definitely worse. Research along Philadelphia's South Fifth Street and New York's Delancey Street bore out the traitorous conclusion. Jewish cooking in general was awful.

To be sure, this revelation did not necessitate the setting up of picket lines or the printing of leaflets or even the reading of papers before learned societies. It was merely something to be sadly accepted, like most unpleasant truths.

But truth is a hard taskmaster. It drove me to seek confirmation from my friends. In many cases, these friends quickly became enemies and soon I was asking questions of enemies who had never been friends. But I did find confirmation. Some gave it sadly, some bitterly, some brazenly, and some from behind guilty hands. Some preferred New England, some French, and some Chinese, but they all preferred something to mama's home cooking.

To be sure, the picture was not all black. The usual answer was, "The meals were pretty bad, except for . . ." Everyone remembered some great delicacy that only his mother or grandmother could make. Even I, apostate that I was, remembered some things with delight. Unfortunately, these remembered delicacies were not part of the weekly bill of fare nor even spécialités de la maison. They were, for the most part, special holiday dishes made once or twice a year, and absolutely impossible to get ... my father ... fried matzoh and my sister liked fried matzoh. But we could eat fried matzoh only during Passover. We have chametzdike matzoh the rest of the year. We used it for soup, instead of crackers, for jam, for lots of things. But we couldn't get fried matzoh except for Pesach.

A man I know has an unwholesome, almost sexual passion for chopped eggs. Not the tasteless stuff that comes as "a choice" to pickled herring on the appetiser list of a Jewish restaurant, but the real pesachdike chopped eggs with onions and chicken fat and a certain air. This dish also was reserved for one week during the spring. Yet eggs were plentiful and onions cheap and chickens well padded in other seasons.

Homantoshen. I remember real Purim homantoshen. Not the bread-dough triangles stuffed with gooey poppy seeds that disgrace the windows of Bronx bakeries. I mean homantoshen in small tricornes of crisp, crumbly dough full to bursting with genuine puhvedle. Puhvedle that caused fights among the children as to who would lick the spoon, puhvedle made of prunes and nuts and strange, secret things. These homantoshen were not bound by dietary laws. They were happy, joyous commemorative cakes. But ask for them in September and mother had an answer: "Meshugs darf men nein."

Some of the good things from mother's kitchen were monthly or even weekly affairs. These, too, were bound about with tradition. Take strudel, for instance. Strudel is something that only a grandmother can make. It is a pastry, a confection, a dream of ambrosia, but more earthy. But only a grandmother can make it. No biologist has discovered the chemical or hormone change that takes place when a grandchild is born and ripens when the child is able to eat strudel. It is just there. Countless mothers have watched as many grandmothers go through the processes that evolve into strudel. They have measured and timed and written down. But to no avail. Mothers cannot make strudel.

We were unfortunate. Other kids had grandmothers living with them, some had them around the block or across town. My grandmother lived a hundred miles away. Three or four times a year she would come to visit, carrying her own dishes because she didn't trust the milshedik and fleishedik differentiations in our house. She loved her grandchildren, but I think she came to make strudel. After the grandchildren were inspected and kissed, the children berated, and the tea and lemon sipped down, she would start the strudel. Grandma would roll up the sleeves of her shabbosdike dress, put on a clean white apron (colored or figured ones were bad for baking), and begin the grandmotherly task, spreading white flour on a board table, arranging a battery of bowls and boxes, and assigning the lesser tasks of shelling nuts, washing raisins, and paring apples. Slowly the delicacy would take form.

My mother would be moving nervously about all this time. It was ... tion of knowing ingredients and amounts and techniques. I could have told her. They weren't important. She would be able to make strudel too. But not yet....

Lekach and sponge cake were within a mother's domain. Occasionally a grandmother would play around with these simple sweets, but that was only showing off or taking up the slack for an ill or overworked mother. Normally we judge baking or cooking by taste. Not sponge cake. This Friday specialty was spread before visitors and relatives during the week-end. The women guests would look at it critically. Each visiting female would pick up a piece and weigh it in her hand. Some would nod their heads up and down and some would shake them across. "It's nice and light" was the accolade. "It's not as light as last time" was the black hood. Mother, waiting apprehensively, would be ready with the second test. "A dozen eggs it took," she would offer. The judges would narrow their eyes to check the color of the cake and shake their heads again. "A dozen eggs. Fine. Fine."

Lekach was the other Friday evening goody. This nice honey cake was best described as something of which last week's version was better. What the original tasted like only the Lord knew and only He would have been good enough to eat it. Each week it was quite palatable and each week it was described as "Not as good as last week's."

One thing sponge cake and lekach had in common. They were the most fragile concoctions on earth. Once placed in the oven, the entire house

• CANADIAN Jewish Congress: David L. Seigel, of Toronto, has been appointed liaison officer with immigration workers in the American Occupation Zone of Europe and in Italy. Mr. Siegel, who is 39, was born in Toronto. He is the son of Mrs. Ida L. Siegel, 28 Austin Terrace, and studied at the Williamson Road School, the Riverdale Collegiate, the University of Toronto, McMaster University in Hamilton B.A. 1931), and the Ontario College of Education. He taught at the William Houston School and the Ogden School. In 1939 he went to England as exchange teacher and took part in two evacuations of the school children from London and in supplementary teaching necessitated by the dislocation of the Battle of Britain. He joined the Home Guard when it was formed and served on Parliament Square. In 1940 he returned to Canada as civilian officer in charge of a Canadian repatriation ship and the following year he joined the R.C.A.F. Radar Service. He was commissioned overseas in 1942 and served until well after the end of the war as ground radar technical officer for Headquarters Group 85 in Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, and Germany. He was discharged in December, 1945, with the rank of Lieutenant. He became the business manager of the national American magazine, "This Month", then joined the Department of Mines, first in the office of the Deputy Minister and later in the overseas section of the Immigration Branch. He was supervisor of Goel Tzedec Sunday School to Rabbi Samuel Sachs, and founded the Junior Congregation of the synagogue in 1928. Mrs. David I. Siegel is the daughter of the well known Yiddish writer and leader of the Freeland Movement, Dr. I. M. Steinberg. They have one son, Daniel.

Great of the Ancients

This classic of antiquity is perhaps the best known of the Pergamon school, where the sculptors Isogonus, Phyromachus and Antigonus celebrated in a series of bronze statues the victories of kings over the Gauls. The Gallic warrior has just stabbed himself after defeat. This masterpiece is in the Capitoline museum at Rome.
The art of a skilled distiller combined with an unhurried ageing and the finest of ingredients give body and mellow flavour to a superb Rye Whisky . . . In Harwood's the choosy find that pleasantly mellow taste and bouquet which characterizes it as a whisky of distinguished excellance.

YOU Can TAKE IT WITH YOU!
When you travel this summer don't let worry about the safety of your money mar your trip.
B of M Travellers Cheques are your safest and surest way of carrying money . . . and they are as convenient as cash.
Here's how they work: Travellers Cheques are just like 20, 50 and 100 dollar bills, except that they're not legal without your signature!
Suppose you take $200 with you. You can, for example, buy five $20 cheques and two $50 cheques . . . total, $200. When you buy them . . . you sign at the top. When you cash them you sign at the bottom.
Simple . . . and safe. The person who cashes them can see immediately that the signatures compare, and he knows that they are your cheques. If lost, they are useless to the finder.

Most important—Travellers Cheques sold by the B of M can be cashed at any bank . . . anywhere.

Fly U.S. Mail To Israel At Sender's Risk

...ttlieb Hammer, controller of ...New York office of the Agen... said he had received "thou... of inquiries" about how to ...mail to Israel. Mr. Hammer ...that consequently the Pales... Emergency Deliveries, Inc., ...East Sixty-sixth Street, had been established to get the mail through.

The emergency service will end as soon as normal channels are re-established, he explained. But, before regular delivery can be started, recognition must come from the Universal Postal Union and air traffic must be reopened on a steady basis.

To be acceptable for delivery, mail must be prepared in this way:

"Sealed letters addressed to individuals residing in the State of Israel should bear and have affixed the requisite United States postage (25 cents a half ounce or fraction thereof); an additional service charge of 25 cents per half ounce or fraction thereof to cover the cost of handling must be paid in coin or postal money order; and the sealed letters and the service charge must be enclosed in another envelope and addressed to Palestine Emergency Deliveries, Inc., 60 East Sixty-sixth Street, New York 21, N. Y."

Mr. Hammer said that this procedure had been checked with the United States Post Office and was in accordance with its regulations. He said that "any carrier" could accept mail provided it bore the required postage, cancelled as prescribed. The service charge also is normal under the Post Office's regulations.

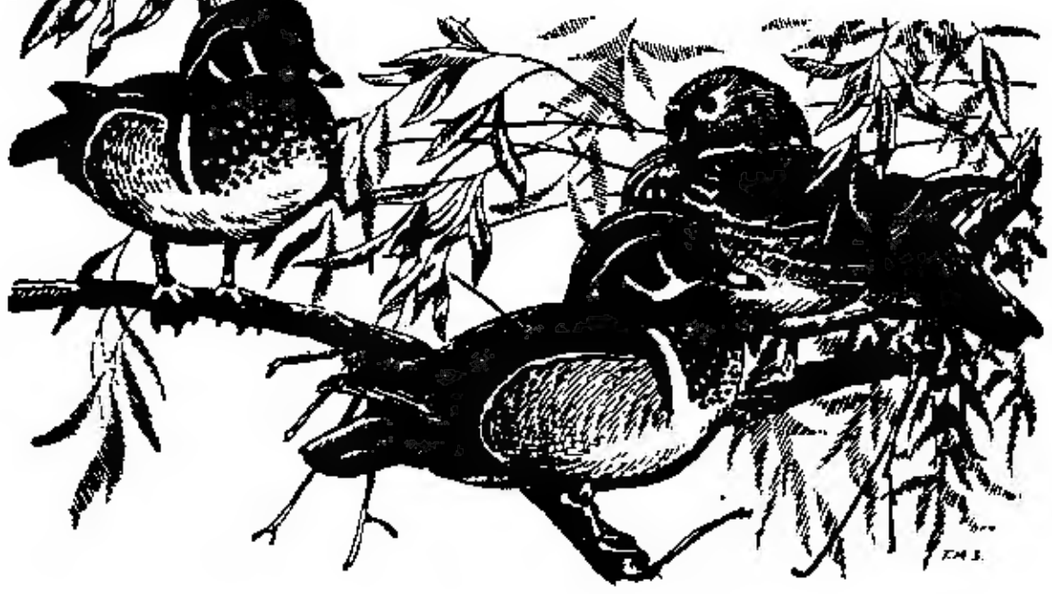
A duck that nests in trees and prefers wooded swamps to open water! That's the Wood Duck, the most beautiful of our waterfowl. They are well protected by law, but the draining of wetlands and clearing away of the dead tree trunks they nest in presents a serious threat to their survival. Everything you do to preserve their natural nesting areas will help to conserve the Wood Duck for years to come.



The Labrador Duck became extinct before 1900. Today 44 stuffed specimens are all that remain of this little sea-duck, showing what happens when sound conservational practices are neglected.

was alerted. No walking, no sitting heavily, no closing of doors, no sneezing, no loud talking. Our oven could take the slightest sounds or jars, pick them up, translate them into tremendous waves and beat these waves against the cake. A child entering the house while baking was in progress would be met by mother on tiptoes with her finger before her lips and a whispered admonition. If, God forbid, a door slipped out of your hand, mother would come down on her heels, spread her arms, and look beseechingly upward. The second noise would cause her to wail, "Farlossen dem lebaack." A third noise and she would let loose, "In drehrd dem lebaack." That was serious.

It might have been the stress placed upon the few sweets at home or it might have been the reaction from home cooking that made us haunt the corner candy-store.

Accordingly, and by a not too subtle dialectic, any amount of Jewish cuisine should include a supplementary note on the traditional supplement to our diet — candy from the candy-store.

For a penny we had a wide choice. To my mother there were [illegible] of making up for having children just as she hadn't achieved the knowledge of strudel by not yet having any grandchildren. We were the mehren, the authorities, on candy.

The one-for-a-cent had subdivisions, too. There were the good candies, nationally advertised, their size cut down by the cost of advertising, their flavor weakened by the food-and-drug acts. These included Mary Janes, Tootsie Rolls, Heraheys. The second group was more fascinating. We could get a tin dish full of pink taffy and a small tin spoon. The tin spoon always bent and broke before all the taffy was gouged out and we would have to suck and scrape with our teeth. When I went home with a cut lip my mother couldn't immediately give me the "fighting with shkutzim" slap because I might be deserving of the "eating poison" above.

Then there were long, two-foot strips of paper sprinkled with candy dots. The candy dots were in pink and green and were evenly spaced in two rows. They never came off the paper cleanly. With each dot we had to eat a small circle of paper. No one died from it.

I had three favorites. For my money the best buys included caramels, large black ones at three-for-a-penny. These were movie fare. For ball playing and general sport use, sour balls were best. They kept well in pants pockets and they lasted a long time. The pocket mice that would stick to the surface of sour balls came off clean with one swipe of the tongue. In exotic moods, my penny went for burnt marshmallow. We could get two bananas of hard marshmallow, one white, one pink, or a Santa Claus of the same candy. With this sale we were entitled to one kitchen match. With the match we charred the outside of the marshmallow and ate the gooey drippiness, black and all.

They were good. For babies there were grab bags. For that same single medium of exchange, the penny, you could get a small paper bag filled with stale, broken sweet crackers, an odd piece of candy, a marble. These were good for movies too, but we didn't buy them openly after we passed six. Then there were the box chances. This device included row on row of small chocolate-covered creams. We would put our penny on the counter—penny first was obligatory in this transaction — and study the chocolates. The trick was to pick one that looked a little different, that had a bubble of chocolate sticking up or a small indentation. Some superstitious kids counted out, three down and three across or eeny-meeny. The choice made, we would slowly, carefully break the candy across the middle. If the inside was white, well, we had a piece of candy. If it was chocolate colored, we got a nickel-size bar. If it was red, then the heavens opened —we got a large Easter egg.

The "pull" involved real gambling. This game needed a crowd. No kid ever took a pull without calling the entire gang to watch. The gambler would approach the counter and demand in a loud, manly voice, "I want a pull." Then he laid his penny on the counter. The storekeeper would reach under the counter and bring up a fistful of long slim pieces of cardboard. One end of the cardboard was blank, the end he kept hidden in his hand had a number on it. After agonized debate and wishing and consultation, the choice was made and one cardboard sliver was pulled out of the hand. If the number of the paper ended in five, the gambler got a small Easter egg; if it ended in zero, a larger Easter egg; if it ended in two zeros, a large [illegible] decorated box of candy....

That's how it was in our [illegible] and on our street. The mind [illegible] gets, but the stomach remem[illegible]

CLASS IN COOKERY

FISH RING

one and one-half pounds fillets of halibut four eggs, separated salt and pepper
one tablespoon chopped parsley one tablespoon chopped onion
one-half pint whipping cream

Cut fish into small pieces and put these through the mincer. Add the yolks of eggs well beaten. Then add the whipped cream. Beat the egg whites until very stiff and add to the mixture. Add seasonings, mix well and put into a buttered ring pan. Cover and leave in the frigidaire overnight. Bake in an oven of 350 degrees steamed over water (the baking dish is placed in another pan of warm water) for about one hour.

Mrs. Myer Robinson,
2054 Van Horne Avenue, Montreal.

APPLE BETTY

Using a greased deep baking dish, slice about five apples into it and sprinkle one-half cup sugar and one-half teaspoon cinnamon on top. Then make a batter of the following ingredients:

two eggs
one cup sugar
one tablespoon butter
one-half cup milk
one teaspoon vanilla
two cups flour
two teaspoons baking powder

Cream the butter and sugar together. Add vanilla, and eggs, well-beaten. Mix, add the milk, and the flour and baking powder, which have been sifted together. Pour this mixture over the apples in baking dish, and bake in a slow oven, 300 degrees, for about three-quarters of an hour, or more.

U.S. Bars Sailing To Be Neutral

The passports of ten prospective passengers for troubled Palestine were seized and permission to sail on the liner Marine Carp was refused them. All were citizens of the United States.

Agents of the Department of State had detained a total of thirty-one American passengers under departmental orders, but all except the ten were cleared, one by one, after repeated telephone conversations with authorities at the department's headquarters in Washington.

Those held at New York were permitted to return to their homes. One was a young woman, Miss Rose Nemetz, of Brooklyn, N.Y.

A spokesman for the government agents said the action on the liner was taken "in accord with Resolution 29 of the United Nations and in accord with the truce agreement." On the pier at West Forty-fourth Street, where more than 300 passengers had expected to sail at noon, the State Department representatives did not disclose the basis on which the passengers were being investigated, but repeated that the action had been taken to avoid violation in the United States of the Palestine truce agreement.

All of the ten persons held were bound for Haifa, but in mid-afternoon the thirty-one passengers in doubtful status included some bound for Beirut and Alexandria.

The liner, owned by the Maritime Commission and operated by the American Export Line as agents, frankly was cleared and her gangplanks withdrawn at 8.14 p.m. more than eight hours behind schedule.

As the ship prepared to cast off and move down the Hudson River the ten banned passengers left the pier, most of them refusing to talk to reporters.

Longshoremen working at overtime rates had returned to the ship and spent the afternoon taking off and putting back baggage in staterooms and the ship's holds.

The government agents, it was reported at offices of the Maritime Commission, on the basis of reports from Washington, had orders to stop every American passenger, whether male or female, between 18 and 46 years of age.

The Marine Carp was the liner that Lebanese officials boarded and searched in the port of Beirut a month ago. Accompanied by heavily armed soldiers, the authorities questioned passengers and removed forty-one American citizens of military age.

On her return to New York the ... [illegible] ... but a few days later the port was returned to her list of calls.

By sailing time, the Federal agents had compiled a list of passengers subject to their orders, and this list was given to Washington by telephone. Clearance from Washington came back from time to time, but the agents professed not to know the qualifications on which decisions were made. The basis on which some were released and others refused clearance remained a mystery.

Meanwhile the involved passengers waited without knowing until the final hour whether they would sail. None of the passengers was submitted to questioning, and the decisions were left strictly to Washington.

At 8 o'clock, the agent who appeared to be in charge, and who declined to give his name, turned to the remaining passengers and said:

"This is the means the United States Government has used to in... [illegible]

KU KLUX KLAN

terpreted the projected Stone Mountain demonstration as "the beginning of a wide-spread subversive drive to terrorize voters in the coming elections." Klan leaders recently announced a determination to elect more men to Congress whose views "coincide with Klankraft."

Exposure of the KKK's "top secret" plan was made on June 1 in a wire to Georgia's Governor M. E. Thompson from the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, signed by Prof. James H. Sheldon, Administrative Chairman, and Stetson Kennedy, Consultant, advising the Governor of details as outlined by Grand Dragon Samuel Green in the supposed secrecy of his Atlanta Klavern No. 1 on the night of May 31.

Undercover observers of the Anti-Nazi League who attended the Grand Dragon's meeting reported that the Klan chieftain has arranged to send out half a million "firey summonses" to Klansmen all over the country. He expressed hope that there would be at least 1,000 new members to be "naturalized as citizens of the Invisible Empire" at the mountain ceremony.

To this end the Dragon said he had instructed all active klaverns to offer Klan membership at a 50 percent "bargain discount" for a limited time only, thus reducing the "klectokeu" (initiation) fee from $10 to $5, according to the inside reports. At the same time, the Dragon is urging all Klansmen to purchase robes for the occasion, which he sells for $15.

Evidently in anticipation of controversy over the Klan's reappearance on Stone Mountain, traditional gathering place of the hooded order since 1915, Grand Dragon Green said the KKK had leased the mountain for the meeting, and so would be "free to do what it pleased and admit whom it pleased." However, Drew Pearson and Walter Winchell will be sent "special invitations," the Dragon said.

The Klan's postwar comeback trail has re-established it as an active factor in some 15 states, including such non-Southern states as Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, and California, the Anti-Nazi League asserted. Green claims, in addition, to have established embryonic groups in another 15 states.

A Mask For Privilege

(Concluded from Last Week)

However, probing deeper into the problem of anti-Semitism, Mr. McWilliams rightly points out that because Jews constitute the most vulnerable minority, and in the middle of the middle class, and that, too, because so much of Christian culture is possessed of a deep anti-Semitic bias, anti-Semitism in all forms occupies a prominent place in the land of the free and the home of the brave.

One of the finest chapters in the book is the author's study of "The Function Of The Crackpot". These crackpots, he rightly asserts, constitute the shock troops in race prejudice and are not to be laughed off. How true all this is! Those of us who are in public work know well how any crackpot in any organization, if given power, may destroy the best of institutions. The function of the crackpot is not to reason, but to motivate expression of anti-Semitism and to stir the emotions of people to hate something or somebody. It is because in the early stages of Nazism that Hitler and his gang were laughed at and scorned as crackpots that the world ultimately experienced the greatest bloodshed in all human history.

Mr. McWilliams feels that the reason we do not correctly measure the rising tide of anti-Semitism in the United States is because we are used to the "classic" anti-Semitism of Europe. That is to say, in Eastern Europe anti-Semitism has been practised by government legislation. This is certainly not true of the United States. But what is true in the United States is the existence of "private governments" which indulge in discriminatory acts against Jews. Behold the banks, the railways, the clubs, the colleges, the heavy industries, how these exclude the Jew! No wonder that Jewish youth is forced to enter the so-called free professions: law, medicine, dentistry, etc. The big executives in the private governments, influenced by the acts of exclusion of the social clubs, bring a similar attitude into the world of industry.

How are we to exercise this terrible disease of anti-Semitism can be and the need for clearing the swamps which breed the disease. He advocates the annihilation of all forms of discrimination by legislation and the reaching out for the co-operative life in the economic realm rather than that of competition.

We all recognize this task to be immense for it would take a long time to establish economic and social democracy in American life. We hope for that day and we shall work for that day. But what can be done at this very moment to improve human life in America so that majorities and minorities may truly live in peace and harmony? Mr. McWilliams insists that prejudice is indivisible and any form of discrimination against any minority must be fought on all fronts, and all barriers to equality of opportunity must be removed in order to make democracy work.

Of course, a program of popular education must be instituted, not merely in tolerance and in expressions of good-will, but rather that education should show to youth the causes which give rise to prejudice. The Federal government must also enter the field as well as state governments to outlaw discrimination from the life of America. And, last but not least, every citizen of a democracy is responsible for democracy and democratic action. Those in position of trust who fail through their inactivity to condemn and denounce discrimination stand accused and condemned at the bar of history.

Often it is the failure of the so-called good people who choose to look on when great moral issues are at stake and refuse to enter the arena to battle for truth and justice that is responsible for so much misery and inhumanity in the world. This means to say that Christian preachers and educators and Christian business men who claim to be followers of Jesus of Nazareth, the Jew who taught love for every human being, can ill afford to be mere bystanders in the struggle which the Jew has to wage for his rights and place, even in the life of the greatest republic on earth, the United States of America.

We recommend "A Mask For Privilege" to all lovers of truth and decency. No person who wishes to be informed should fail to read this honest, analytical volume dealing with a most disturbing and frightening theme.

ISRAEL ARMY CHIEF

message said that Colonel Marcus had fallen at his post in the hills of Jerusalem, and revealed that he had recently been appointed as "supreme commander of our forces at the Jerusalem front and became immediately the moving spirit of that campaign, the most difficult and far-reachingly important of all those we had to fight so far."

The Israeli mission made the following statement:

"Colonel Marcus died trying to open the road to get food through to the people of Jerusalem. This was not the responsibility of the government of Israel. It was a world responsibility, for the United Nations decision of last November provided for an international regime for Jerusalem with free access to all.

"Had the United Nations been able to assume its responsibility and had the Arab-Jewish armistice agreement been observed, the siege of Jerusalem would have been broken long ago. Had the Arab aggression against Jerusalem been prohibited as it should have been weeks ago, the lives of Colonel Marcus and many other brave soldiers and civilians would have been spared."

The announcement was delayed pending notification of the former colonel's wife, Mrs. Emma Chaiom Marcus, who lives at 484 Westminster Avenue, Brooklyn. They have no children.

Alfred Chaiom, a brother-in-law, said Mr. Marcus, travelling as an individual, had returned from Palestine for a few weeks in April to receive in Washington the decoration from the British government for his war-time Haiem work on military government for Germany. He was awarded the C. B. E. — Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire.

Mr. Marcus was graduated from Boys' High School, where he was a baseball and football star.

He was a member of the class of '24 at New York University, from which he received an LL.B. degree in 1927. He was admitted to the bar in 1928 and practised law in Brooklyn.

During the first World War he served in the Army as a private and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Officers' Reserve Corps. He was called to active duty in 1917 and served in the 77th Division in France. He was discharged in 1919 as a first lieutenant.

Between the wars he was active in the Officers' Reserve Corps and through 1926 he served as a lieutenant in the infantry. In 1927 he received a bachelor's degree and in 1928 a doctor's degree from Brooklyn Law School. The following year he was appointed an assistant attorney in the Department of Justice. From 1930 to 1934 he was an Assistant United States Attorney in the Southern District of New York under the late United States Attorney George Z. Medalie.

Colonel Marcus became associated with the New York City Department of Correction on Jan 1, 1934, as first deputy commissioner, holding that post through November. The late Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia appointed him Commissioner of Correction in April, 1940.

At the outbreak of the war he re-entered the Army as a lieutenant colonel, serving first as Judge Advocate and Provost Marshall in the Twenty-seventh Division. He was then in Civil Affairs Division of the Army.

According to reliable reports, Mr. Marcus was shot accidentally by an Israeli sentry. The New York veteran had gone for a stroll near his headquarters late at night. The sentry overhead him talking English and fired, according to the report, says the New York Times.

On his return to civilian life, Colonel Marcus took up the Zionist cause in Palestine, urging the repeal of the arms embargo and expressing confidence in the Haganah as a fighting force. He was familiarly known as "Mickey" Marcus. Tributes to him were paid by Mayor O'Dwyer and Dr. Emanuel Neumann, president of the Zionist Organization of America.

Mr. Marcus said in a press conference in New York last April that the morale of Haganah was "the best of any troops in the world—bar none," and that given adequate modern arms they could easily defeat the Arab nations. An Israeli representative said that Mr. Marcus's undercover work as adviser to Haganah had led to many innovations in the Jewish army's techniques.

Prime Minister Ben-Gurion's message included this: "As a man and a commander he endeared himself to all those who came into personal contact with him and his fame spread through all the ranks of our armed forces. They all admired his superb courage, his remarkable military devotion and his natural, spontaneous human helpfulness."

JEWRY SUFFERS

of mind if he masters both nature and human nature, and gains the insights of both psychology and religion. These were what he attempted to give people, as he had found them in his own life.

As his book leaped to success, his congregation at Temple Israel in Boston grew from 650 families to 1,400. His correspondence from all over the world reached to thousands of letters each week, and the demands on him for lectures, sermons and public addresses were so overwhelming that by September, 1946, he lost his voice after five hours of continuous talking in a single day.

As a result he had to undergo an operation, and thereafter was required to practice complete silence for five months, and to forego more than 500 speaking engagements. It was, he said, the greatest experiment in will power that he ever made.

Dr. Liebman was a voracious reader, a relentless worker, and enjoyed an almost infallible memory. At the time of his death he was completing a new book entitled, "Hope for Man," which was to be published next year as an answer to what he described as the philosophy of "basic gloom and pessimism" expressed by Kafka, Sartre, and Reinhold Niebuhr.

Dr. Liebman took full advantage of all new techniques. By radio and the lecture platform the young man turned a rabbinical career into a cause that surely had results. In straightforward terms he emphasized the universality of human problems, such as loneliness, inferiority, grief and death; the hunger for love, security and the yearning for an association with "the wider horizon of the universe—that Power greater than man, God."

In his discourse he offered little that could be called escape and asked and showed the way to self-discipline and "the renouncing of many things in order to possess other things."

At one point in his book he declared that "religion, which already has made its peace with Copernicus and Darwin, will have to make peace with Freud." This was not to deny Freud, but to challenge some of his negative conclusions.

He applied his theme of universality to American Jewry, contending that it had developed an inferiority complex out of thinking of itself as a minority. He pleaded for an end to weighing groups through numbers, "which was once summarized as:

"Thou shalt love thyself properly and then thou wilt love thy neighbor."

Rabbi Liebman was born on April 7, 1907, in Hamilton, Ohio, a descendant of rabbis on both sides of his family. The son of Simon and Sabina Loth Liebman, he was a precocious student, entering high school at the age of ten, and beginning his rabbinical studies at thirteen. The family moved later to Cincinnati, where the son was graduated from high school and University of Cincinnati. At the university he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa scholarship fraternity.

After the minimum of four years prescribed for post-graduate work in the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, he was ordained in 1930. During his last two years at that institution he taught philosophy on a fellowship at the University of Cincinnati.

Thence he went to the Hebrew University at Jerusalem in 1930. He was said to have become imbued with the Hebrew Union's philosophy, which read: "Judaism is both in spirit and fact a continuously progressive religious discipline—that must be kept constantly liberal and spiritually alert—and if it is to live in America it must be open to every positive influence of modernism, must square itself with every advance of scientific thought, and must engender that type of religious devotion which will evoke the uncompromising loyalty of every Jew."

He studied simultaneously at the University of Cincinnati and Hebrew Union College in that city, and when he was nineteen he was teaching philosophy at the university while taking advanced courses there. One of his pupils was his first cousin, Fan Loth, whom he married in 1928, when he was twenty-one.

Successively, upon returning from Jerusalem, he was a rabbi in a Lafayette, Ind., temple and in the K. A. M. Temple in Chicago, the city's oldest.

During his eight years in the Midwest he added to his studies, received a doctorate in Hebrew from Hebrew Union College and wrote a 500-page book, "The Religious Philosophy of Aaron ben Elijah," a treatise on the major concepts of medieval Jewish philosophy in relation to the influence of Plato and Aristotle.

From Boston his sermons went out to the entire country through the major radio networks. It was estimated that on Sundays alone he reached an audience of between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 persons in the New England states.

While at Temple Israel in Brookline he became in 1944 visiting professor of Jewish philosophy and literature at Andover-Newton Theological Seminary. His publishers hazarded that this was the first time that a rabbi ever had become a full-time faculty member of a Christian theological institute.

In 1945 he was a lecturer at the Bangor (Me.) Theological Seminary, the first to hold the particular lectureship. Also in the same year he served as the Charles W. Eliot lecturer at the Jewish Institute of Religion in New York.

He was chairman of the Massachusetts Governor's Committee of Clergymen for Racial and Religious Activities from 1942 to 1946.

Last fall, expressing his love for Boston and the loyalties and friendships to the congregation he had served there nine years, Dr. Liebman declined a call from Temple Emanu-El in New York, considered the leading Reform congregation in America.

Replying to the invitation Dr. Liebman said that he thought the opportunity for continued service "to Judaism and Americanism from Boston, the birthplace of the American way of life and the vital center of cultural and educational activities in this land, outweigh all other considerations."

His name had been proposed as one of the rabbis who might come to the congregation upon the announced retirement of Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson.

N.A. RIOTS IMPERIL JEWS

A state of emergency was declared in Tripoli because of continuing riots between Jews and Arabs. The British military administration had troops take over security. A 7 p.m. curfew was imposed. Police said that three Jews and four Arabs were killed and eleven Jews injured when fighting started after an argument between two Tunisian Arabs and a Jew. A crowd gathered and quickly got out of hand. It roamed the city, looting shops and burning.

French troops arrived at Casablanca to reinforce the North African garrison after Moslem-Jewish rioting. Troops patrolled the streets of Oudja, center of trouble.

"Someday" comes closer with every dollar you save

Most of us have to plan for the good things of life.
And a big part of that planning is a matter of dollars and cents—of earmarking a certain part of our earnings for the things we want most.
It's not always easy, especially these days.
But the fact remains that what you save is still the most important—the most satisfying—part of what you earn.
Are you hoping for something...or saving for it?
